

Surfmusik?...

„Uhh... is that something like the Beach Boys?“ – „Not really“

... just one example of a frequently held discussion..

60s surf music classics and their own songs drenched in a brew of fuzz, reverb and delay are the instrumental trio The SurfAnauts' answer.

After several live shows, including Treibsand (Lübeck) and the traditional Enzo Festival, The SurfAnauts have honoured their reputation as the loudest surf band in the country.

The magazine "Kielerleben" became aware of The SurfAnauts and printed a large interview. Last but not least, Rockantenne Hamburg broke its iron rule of not playing a song twice for The SurfAnauts and played the song Intoxica twice in a row.

The band's musical socialisation can be located in trash rock'n'roll à la The Cramps, psychobilly and punk and is combined with rare surf songs from past decades.

As the first surf band in Schleswig-Holstein, Lisa (bs), Simon (dr.) and Ulli (git.) are subject to the hypnotic compulsion to missionise surf to every conceivable corner of the country and beyond. Until they pass away and haunt the catacombs of the clubs as surf zombies.
